We observe that a portion of the public press, in speculating on the present crisis, lock to changes in our institutions, or what they call new developments. It appears now that we are a nation, not a confederacy; and from that they infer that the States are mere municipal corporations It appears, too, that the Executive has extraordinary powers not suspected before.

These ideas are no developments of our institutions, but an entire perversion of them. They are not new either. Some of our people have always desired to shape our course in that direction.

The fact is, that the State and Federal Governments are each established by the same sovereign power-that of the people Each has the same authority in its sphere Neither one derives its authority from the

The two may come in collision; for there is between them a margin of questionable iurisdiction; but we have provided as many every State equal; a veto of the President, and, finally, a veto of a Supreme Court, if an act of Congress is unconstitutional. It was intended, therefore, to guard the rights of States, and cenfine the Federal Government to its sphere. In peace there is no danger of any gross departure from the Constitution. The power of the Executive. in peace, is also fixed; and no very import ant differences of opinion have existed as to his acts. In war, however-in civil war, very dim. Unfortunately for Messrs. Lincoln and Seward's declaration, there has been, and is now, according to their theory, an "irrepressible conflict" in Switzerland. For eight hundred years or more the strongest spirit of division, religious propagandism, Protestant and Catholic, have existed in Switzerland. Their contentions strengths ened monarchies all over Europe, but what Henri Quatre could not do in France, with all his genius and power, to soothe the irrepressible conflict, Switzerland has quietly done. The cantons of that republic, part Catholic and part Protestant, divided according to the new theory, have never recognized the irrepressible conflict, but have maintained their civil liberty against all internal and external foes. It is a remarkable refutation of the "republican" theory that sections with diverse interests, in a republic, like a house divided against itself, cannot stand, that one of the oldest nations in the world is a republic in which that very irrepressible conflict has existed

That is, the arrival of the fleet was hailed on the levee by a crowd, in which was a large number of women and children with the usual applause that the American people have been in the habit of giving to what pleases them, and they were fired into by Mayor Monroe's police or force of rowdies. He, instead of apolegising or condemning this act, acknowledges it by his answer, in which it is justified. What he says is as follows: "In conclusion, I beg you to understand that the people of New did in times of peace, when peace returns do not allow themselves to be insulted by the interference of such as have rendered themselves odious and contemptible, by their dastardly de sertion of our cause, in the mighty struggle in which we are engaged."

COURCRY, KNOX COUNTY, KY.,

May 1, 1862.

We left Lexington on the 11th of April and, after a long and tedious march of one hundred and twenty miles, arrived on the 25th, at our present camp ground-named in honor of our brigade commander. The next morning, our regiment, with five others, and three days' rations, left for the Gap. We marched sixteen miles, and, after a light supper, lay on our arms. At four clock A. M., on the 27th, we moved on, but the fog was so thick that we were compelled to halt for two or three hours. After the certain to be opposed by the flocks of cleared up, we continued our march, one thousand men, while the rest of the ex-pedition went to the right. We were only three hundred yards from the rebel camp, and had quite a lively time of it, the sh and shell falling thick and fast.

The rebels sent out two regiments of infantry and one of cavalry to flank us; but six companies of our regiment fell back down a ridge to meet them, when they gave up their design and returned. For five hours there was a continual war of artillery turned in the evening to camp, with but SHOT-PROOF ROTATING FLOATING BATTERY Mr. A. B. Cooley, of this city, has received a patent for a "rotating floating battery. The outer casting or shell of the battery of a circular form, and consists of inclined sides and bottom and inclined roof. In the center of the shell or outer casting is a hollow cylinder, which forms a part of the bottom, and within this cylinder another hollow cylinder fits snugly. On the out-side of the first cylinder, and secured to the same, is a third cylinder, both being secured by fillets, knees, &c. From the upper edge of the cylinder projects a horizontal flange, which rests on pinions, each pinion being secured to a shaf, the journals of which turn in the upper edge of the two outer cylinders, and the teeth of the pinion gearing into a circular rack on the under side of the flange of the cylinder. Within the latter are arranged a series of vertical bars, which are maintained in contact with the inside of the cylinder by suitable guide and into this rack gears a pinion on a spin dle, the journals of which turn in projections on the flange of the cylinder.

This battery being intended for harbor lefense, it must occupy a position where there is sufficient water to float it, and when it is to be used, must be anchored securely. When this is done, by means of bars sunk into the ground, the cylinder is rendered stationary, and forms a secure center, round which the battery revolves. This revolution is effected by the pinions underside of the flange of the cylinder. The space beneath the deck is divided into any convenient number of water-tight compartments by means of radial partitions exending from the cylinder to the sides of the vessel. The space between the roof and the deck is also divided into compartments or casements, which extend from the circular partition to the sides of the vessel, each asements being of sufficient size to allow the roof is a circular opening, covered by a have been crying out, "Perfid ventilate the interior of the battery. PRICE'S SOLDIERS RETURNING HOME .gentleman who has spent several months in Howard and adjacent counties, informs us that hundreds of Price's men who went from that portion of the State are return ing home, glad to take the oath of allegiance and give bonds, as the condition of release. He states that the number of such i estimated at upwards of three thousand. They declare themselves sick of the rebellion, sorry they went into it. and anxious to see peace re-established.

He says the disposition of this class far better than that of the malignant promoters of rebellion, who themselves staying at home, prompted ardent and inconsiderate young men to join the rebel army. These malignants are bitter and unrelenting, and some of them encourage guerrillas in their predatory movements, desiring to perpetu-ate the animosities and hatred they have been active in creating. The men who have seen the elephant and "had enough of it," return home better men, and the influence of such in their neighborhood is most sal utary.

At all times we have looked upon the great mass of the rebel soldiery as being far less guilty than their officers and instigators. The true policy is one of clemency to the former and stringent severity to the latter. -St. Louis Democrat. 7th.

YouTHFUL BRAVERY .- The following ac ount of an incident of the battle near Pittsburg Landing is given by one who is enabled to vouch for its entire authenticity; In the battle at Pittsburg Landing, young Martin Beem, of Alton, Ill., scarce 18 years old, was a Sergeant in the 13th Missour having entered the regiment as a private. On that fatal Sunday the color bearer was shot down at his side; he caught up the flag and carried it through the day, and slept that night with its folds around him. The next day his Captain appointed him Second Lieutenant pro tempore. The first volley killed the First Lieutenant and Martin took his place. Soon after the Lieutenant Colone fell, and the Captain of Martin's company acted as Mejor, leaving this young hero to carry the company through the battle, which he did most gallautly, and escaped unharmed. oung Martin Beem was in a printing office when the war broke out; he went to St Louis and enlisted among the three months volunteers. At the expiration of that service he enlisted for the war. We may hear more from him ere the war is over.

VERA CRUZ, April 18, 1862. Dates from the capital are to the morning of the 13th. The notice of the rupture had arrived on the night of the 11th, but was not publicly known until the 12th, when the most profound sensation followed. The talk was all for war to the last against the French, thus showing that it did not metter so much who the invaders were, they were merants who prey upon the vitals of the and coming upon the enemy's pickets drove them in, and took up a position on the left of the Gap, on the Tennessee side, with ories of this anarchized country, and acnation through the national palace, and whose voices are heard above the agonizing cepted abroad as public opinion. It matters little whether it be English, Spanish, French or American, these Mexican cormorants do not wish to be disturbed at their feast. No matter if one cannot get out of a gate of the city, as now, without being seized and carried off for ransom, it little matters to those who live about the palace. They want no foreign interference; for that might check their operations. These men exercise a powerful influence over the Gov and musketry. We had no artillery, and ernment, and bully down any honest exhaving accomplished the object in view, repression of opinion by their audacity. pression of opinion by their audacity. Hence the cry of preparations for defense —which defense, of necessity, scatters many fat contracts among these harpies-the money for which is to be wrested from foreigners and a few native capitalists.

They will, no doubt, make some prepara-tions for defense. I see four thousand men were on their way from Jalisco, and that Gen. Ortega was expected soon from San Louis Potosi with his division—not stated how strong. The contingents from all the States were to be ordered in, and it was supposed they could get some thirty thou-sand men together; but this was by no means certain. Another report that we have here is that the capital is to be removed to Morelia (the ancient Valladolid, where Morelos first set up his Congress). I think this story probable; for from that position there is always a chance to bolt for the Pacific; or, in the event of their being left alone for a time, they may collect the revenues of Manzanilla, by extending their forces in that direction. In any event I do not imagine the Mexicans will make any the inside of the cylinder by suitable guide strong resistance in the capital. Suppos-rollers. Do not entertain a doubt on this subject. Then, as for their guerillas, the French will be well provided with contraguerillas, more having already offered than they want. In this you see the patriotism of the Mexican. For money he turns upon his brother. It was the same story with Gen. Scott. He found plenty to come when which gear into the circular rack on the he offered money. There will be no battle this side of Mexico, unless, perhaps, Zara-gosa may show fight, which I doubt. ther venture to say that Gen. McClellan is progressing noiselessly, but efficiently, with his plan—which, of course, cannot be de-tailed—and that it will be successful. The result may not come in a week, perhaps not in a month, but it must come. Haste would cost thousands of lives without insuring victory. What is going on will save lives and add vastly to our chances of succes. With me this is a sufficient reason for pleading for patience. Gen. McClellan, 1 doubt not, meant more than he seemed to mean when he said there would be no more Bull Run affairs. If defeated, he does not mean that it shall be because he goes into battle prematurely—with the chances two to one against us. There is a widespread impression that a mistake was made in not attacking the rebels at Manassas instead of Yorktown. Though to some extent partaking of that feeling, I now believe that it is wrong. I have seen those, too, who were most positive in this impression, whose opinious have been entirely changed by an inspection of the rebel defensive works between Centerville and Manassas.

The Fifty-sixth Illinois, Fortyeighth Indiana, and Eightieth Ohio regi ments, who formed a local garrison at Paducah, have gone up to Pittsburg Landing, to be in at the next battle.

WASHINGTON, May 7 .- Herald's Dispatch. A dispatch from New York with information, brought by the Columbia, of the capture of New Orleans, was received in the Senate this morning, during the debate upon the city railroad bill. It was well received, and Senator McDougal immediate ly moved a vote of thanks to Com. Farragut and Gen Butler, saying to Senators that their recognition of such important services should be as prompt as their gratitude was hearty. Parliamentary rule required the unanimous consent to entertain the motion, and some Senator objected, so that McDougal's generous purpose was temporarily de

About thirty contrabands arrived here to day, mostly from Virginia, and are quartered in Duff Green's Row, which was once a fashionable block of residences. People from all parts of the country resort there to hire contraband help. The free negroes and other laborers of the District are somewhat disturced by this influx, which can be hired for almost nothing; but the Govern-ment having the article thrown upon its hands, must dispose of it in the readiest manner possible.

The Times' editorial correspondence from Yorktown says General Franklin went up the York river with his division yesterday, and I hear this morning that General Sedge-wick had also embarked at Yorktown, and will join Franklin this morning. They are expected to march from the York river to a place called New Kent, on the road between Williamsburg and Richmond, and thus cut off the rebels' retreat. We hear no firing this morning. It is now 9 o'clock, from which we infer that the rebels withdrew during the night, or else that our troops are awaiting the arrival of Franklin and Sedgewick in their rear.

I am inclined to think they will cross the Chickshoming creek and destroy the bridges and ferry, so as to prevent pursuit. This seems to be the only way in which they can hope to save any portion of their army. It is barely possible that we may have hard fighting yet, but the general epinion is that the enemy will escape in the way indicated, and that Gen. McClellan can advance upon Richmond without any very formidable opposition. BALTIMORE, May 8 .- The following, dated Yorktown, May 8, at 10 o'clock, is itaken from the correspondence of the American of this city: As I close my letter the latest intelligence received from the field of battle is that Gen. from the American's account of the battle at Williamsburg:

The battle before Williamsburg, on Monday, was a most warmly contested engage—shipping. Our loss is 36 killed and 178 ment. Owing to the roughness of the wounded. The enemy lost from 1,000 to country, and the bad condition of the roads, 1,500, besides several hundred prisoners but a small portion of our troops could be brought into action. General Sickles' Excelsior brigade and General Hooker's division bore the brunt of the battle, and fought most valiantly throughout, though greatly overpowered by numbers and the superior position and earthworks of the enemy. The approaches to their earthworks were a series of ravines and swamps. The rain fell in torents throughout the day The men had also been lying on their arms all the previous night in a wood, and were soaked with the rain and chilled with the cold. The battle raged from early in the forenoon till three in the afternoon, when General McClellan arrived with fresh troops, and mcliellan arrived with fresh troops, and relieved the division of General Hooker, who were nearly prostrate with fatigue and exposure; whilst the 3d Excelsior regiment, of Sickles' brigade, had its ranks terribly thinned by the balls of the enemy. They are represented as having fought with such bravery that not less than two hundred of them are killed and wounded. After the arrival of General McClellan the enemy were fiercely charged by Hancock's brigade, and were driven within their works before nightfall, with heavy loss Nearly seven hundred of their dead were left on the field, with many wounded, though most of the latter were carried into Williamsburg. Our loss was less than 300 killed and about 700 wounded. Night came on, and we occupied the battlefield, the enemy having been driven within his works. and our forces laid on their arms, prepared to storm the works in the morning. On Clay's guerrillas, has returned. They fell in with them in the vicinity of Obion river.

Fort Magruder was a most extensive work and capable of a prolonged defense; but the enemy had abandoned it early in the night, retreating in the greatest alarm and confusion, as described by a few negroes whom they found in the town. A large number of wagons, munitions, and a confinement.

THE DEAD BROUGHT TO LIFE J. H. MONTGOMERY'S

J. B. MONTGOMERY'S

DYRING, SCOURING, AND TAILORING ESTABlishment, is on Jefferson street, north side, between Third and Fourth, No. 316, where the above named work is done in a style that surpasses anything in this community. Owners feel disappointed when they see their old clothes; they present a very different appearance for a reasonable consideration.

Those philosophers who insist that dress makes the man, can put their philosophy to the test at a very triding expense, by calling at J. H. MONTGOMERY's establishment. Those who have dilapidated wardrobes would do well to have them pass through my hands:
they will find it profitable by so doing. All work placed in my care is done with neatness and dispatch.

All kinds of Clothing made to order on the shortest notice and most reasonable terms.

I feel grateful to the community for their liberal pa tronage, and I flatter myself that I have given satis faction, or else I could not have the over-crowd of work that is daily brought to my shop; and the cry is,
"Still they come." It is the whole cry. If you wan your work done right, go to Montgomery's; there you will be pleased, for heis the one that can doit. Let those be longing to the fraternity bring their work along, and have it done in a handsome style.

Ladles' Silks, Satins, Velvets, Woolens, and Cottons, cleansed and dyed to any shade or color, and warranted not to rub off or fade. Crape Shawis cleansed to leok ike new. As the good weather is coming, ladies, sen your Shawis and Dresses and have them beautified.
